Legal Technology Moving Closer to Your Firm

Cleveland, OH (Jan. 25, 2006) – Accellis Technology Group, a legal technology services and consulting firm currently located in Chagrin Falls, OH, announced that it is moving its offices to a larger, more centrally located facility in Garfield Heights, OH in the spring of 2006. The newly designed office, located on Transportation Boulevard just off of interstate 480, will include a classroom for software training classes, an expanded data center and more office space for the growing company’s employees.

The move will be completed at the end of February 2006, and is primarily intended to improve upon the firm’s ability to provide fast and reliable service to clients throughout northeast Ohio and to accommodate its expanding consulting team. The space has been specifically designed to allow for optimal team interaction and project management. Since the spring of 2005, Accellis has added several senior legal technology consultants, networking service consultants, an accounting consultant and a marketing manager.

The company’s president, Joseph Marquette, recognized the time for a move was now. “The truth is that we are at capacity with our current space and needed to make a change. When we looked at our options, we quickly realized that we would be better able to respond to our client’s requests if we were more centrally located. The new offices at Overlook Point will give us the ability to improve service, employee retention and hopefully long-term profitability.”

Taking advantage of the rising increase in legal technology utilization amongst small to mid-sized law firms, Accellis has built a business that provides a complete range of technology solutions for businesses that were previously unable to get such specialized services. Said Mr. Marquette, “The truth is that the technology needs of a law firm are unlike that of most other businesses. Our goal is to present our clients with the solutions that can really help them improve their practice and profitability.”
